Adelaide Avenue bus stops study

The ACT Government is currently investigating options for bus stops along Adelaide Avenue at Curtin, Yarralumla and Deakin.

Consultation with the community was held in February 2012 to identify community visions, needs and priorities for public transport along Adelaide Avenue. The consultation gained valuable feedback on preliminary options for bus stops at key locations. Following this process, a detailed technical assessment was undertaken to determine preferred options for bus stop designs.

The ACT Government is now seeking community feedback on the preferred options with a view to better understand the range of stakeholder and community interests. This feedback will help refine the options and will be considered during a full cost benefit analysis that will be undertaken in the next stage of this project.

About the study

The ACT Government is committed to improving Canberra's public transport system by developing a network that better serves current patrons and encourages greater patronage.

The rapid transit system between Woden and Civic is a frequent service with buses at approximately five minute intervals during peak periods. Design options for bus stops at key locations along Adelaide Avenue will provide improved and safe access to public transport to residents, workers and visitors between Curtin and Deakin. This project is investigating the feasibility of these stops and the development of concept plans for necessary infrastructure.

As part of Transport for Canberra, the ACT Government committed $147 million to road and public transport initiatives in the 2011-12 Budget. A total of $244 million has been committed since 2010-11 with this project being part of that funding.

Have your say

The preferred options for bus stops at each of the three locations will be displayed at a community information session, where the community will have an opportunity to ask questions and comment.
